WHICH COUNTRY SHOULD YOU CHOOSE?

A Self-Help Quiz For The Diplomacy Player by Tom McMillen

I'm sure that all players have at some time or another had to face the problem of playing a country that just didn't suit their style. So, for the beginner or the player who just can't seem to come up with a satisfactory preference list, I have designed this simple yet comprehensive quiz. Simply answer each question, then total the scores for each country for the answers you have given. The numerical raking produced will unequivocally represent your correct preference list. (Scoring will be found on page 2.)

Questions

1. If a commercial jet-liner crashed in your town, and you heard that it was the second largest disaster in aviation history, would you be disappointed? (a) yes (b) no.
2. Given only the following choices, would you rather spend the rest of your life (a) in Nazi Germany (b) at the Woodstock Festival (c) at Shea Stadium during a perpetual rainout.
3. Do you feel that the black sneakers worn by the Boston Celtics look silly? (a) yes (b) no.
4. If you were living in the Garden of Eden, and you discovered an escape tunnel, would you make a break for it? (a) yes (b) no.
5. As a child, did you "blow up" frogs with either a soda-straw or a firecracker? (a) yes (b) no (c) I still do.
6. Which of the following would you prefer? (a) to be known as someone who is honest and decent (b) to actually be honest and decent (c) to forego(a)&(b) and run for President.
7. If you went to Three Rivers Stadium, and the message board kept flashing syrupy signs of what a "Family" the Pirates are, would you be able to keep down breakfast? (a) yes (b) no.
8. Would you rather have your daughter become (a) a nun (b) a masseuse (c) a Groon Beret.
9. Which emotion gives you the most satisfaction? (a) rage (b) guilt (c) self-pity.
10. If only the following programs were on television, which would you watch? (a) A National Geographic Special--"The Wheat Farmers of Canada" (b) A Padres-Giants baseball game (c) Charlie's Angels.

IT'S SUMMER RE-RUN TIME

During the past 7½ years a lot of material has flowed under the bridge in C&F. Send in your vote for which article/story you would like to see rerun.

Scoring for Which Country Should You Choose?

1. (a) R-1, E-1, T-1 (b) F-1
2. (a) R-2, G-1, E-1 (b) A-2, F-1 (c) I-3
3. (a) T-1, (b) I-1
4. (a) G-2, A-1 (b) F-3, T-1, E-1
5. (a) E-1, G-1 (b) F-1 (c) R-2, T-1
6. (a) A-2, F-1 (b) Forget it (c) T-2
7. (a) I-2, F-1 (b) E-2, T-2, G-1
8. (a) I-1, F-1 (b) T-1 (c) R-2
9. (a) G-3, A-2 (b) E-2, T-2 (c) I-3, A-2
10. (a) F-1 (b) I-2 (c) A-1

Highest possible scores: A-8, E-8, E-10, G-8, I-12, R-7, T-11

THE DEMISE OF CLAW &amp; FANG

With the increase of demands on my time by other interests, last December I reached a tentative decision to wind down publishing. I knew that it would take at least a year for the games to run down to a manageable size. I first announced only a cessation of game openings which would still give me a chance to change my mind about quitting. Next I announced that I would not accept any subscriptions past issue number 124. This seemed like a nice number and was over a year in the future (and longer than some people publish). Still the decision was not irrevocable. However, I'm now making it official. CLAW & FANG will cease to exist with issue #124. The remaining games will be carried to completion by "carbon copy".

I will have been publishing for over 8 years in a field where few publish for much more than two years. My circulation has been (and is) higher than almost any other gamezine past and present and this is with virtually no trades.

I feel that no one knows the work and time and expense that goes into putting out a gamezine unless they have done so themselves. Gamemastering alone has its headaches that most of my Guest GM's learned quickly. However, I'm not gone yet. There are still 8 issues of C&F left.

This issue is dedicated to the Tasmanian wolf--an endangered species.

The Players Statements:

Tom McMillen (Germany): A rather sorry ending for what was, for me at least, a very exciting game--as any game would be when you're fighting for victory without ever approaching any edge of the board. Our initial E-G alliance was very successful, probably due mainly to surprise since such things seem out of vogue right now. (Actually, in the 20 or so games I've seen in C&F, German survival is out of vogue.) By 1905 we had about 25 centers in the bag, so with 13 centers and a good shot at 3 more I went for the win. I figured if it didn't work I could always cede victory to my loyal ally. So I made a superfecta of wrong guesses, then Don quits. Bummer, bummer. After his resignation things didn't make much sense--E & T seemed capable of biting off large chunks of me at will, but they didn't make immediate headway and, strangely, agreed to a quick draw. I think there was a lot of play left in the final position, but not for me.

A tip of the proverbial cap to Don Dorsett, the perfect ally. We averaged better than a letter a week for over a year, and I hope he gets some consolation from the fact that he would have had a tidy 1907 win in his maiden game if he hadn't had to resign. Also to Ben, the perfect arch enemy. His only communication was a 1901 phone call, but our struggle for the hearts and minds (and centers) of A-R-I was the main action of the game. And of course, great thanks to whatshisname for crisp, professional Clling.

Ben Zablocki (Turkey): This was a challenging and enjoyable game throughout. The game was dominated by McMillen's Germany from the very beginning. He was the driving force behind the faultlessly executed Anglo-German alliance that dominated the game and provided the central political fact that the rest of us could only try to respond to as best we could. In the east, I was early faced with a critical decision: to build a countervailing coalition to oppose the Anglo-Germans or try to confront them myself on equal terms. I chose the latter and it was almost a fatal mistake. More exactly, I should say it was a fatal mistake that I was rescued from by McMillen's bad luck.

All game long, I was devoting most of my efforts to trying to pry England away from Germany. Although I had grown to a dominating position in the east, I knew that I would never be able to survive the joint anglo-german attack that was surely coming. Then in 1906, Germany executed a brilliant stab of England. Because the alliance was so well crafted, no sure-thing stab was possible but the odds on this one were in his favor. But a bunch of right guesses saved England's Scandinavian holdings and the game became a three way stalemate, although some doubt and suspense remained for another two years.

I learned a lot from this game. It was a pleasure to play against an opponent of McMillen's caliber and, having done so, I feel fortunate to have come out of it with a share of a three way draw. We were both also lucky, I would say, to have a man of Gary Schmidt's skill and integrity come into the game so late as a standby to keep the game from disintegrating after Don Dorsett dropped out.

Gary Schmidt (England): Don Dorsett, the original England, played very well into a fine position. Both Tom McMillen and Ben Zablocki played well, and anything other than a draw would be unfair. Congratulations to Don, Tom, and Ben. I enjoyed my part in this game, and my sincere thanks to all.

WINTER 1908 and SPRING 1909 orders are due at Alcala on or before noon, Tuesday, 5 August 1908. I have an envelope from Scott and will send a carbon to him. Just to be fair, and on this occasion only, I will send a carbon to Mark (who usually sends an envelope anyway).

I will not ask for stand by orders for Austria, since Mark is one of the most dependable people I know and I have (for instance) a letter about this game from him, but no orders.

As to Italy: We are in a peculiar situation. The original player has resigned. The original stand-by, Drake Autarch, has twice failed to submit orders and should be reflected as dropped. [Just today I received the last two issues of C&F back that I had mailed to Drake. They were marked "not at this address".] The next stand-by, Ken Baker, is now at this point player of record for Italy. And he has NMRd this season. So: I now request Spring 1909 orders for Italy from Ken, and I request stand-by orders from David Loewenstern 12002 Audubon Ave, Philadelphia, PA 19116. Once I know for sure who's playing Italy, I'll see that he gets a copy of the HRs and a set of addresses.

Finally: Dwayne Shreve has proposed a 5-way draw. Please check HRs 28b and 29, and vote on the draw with your Spring 1909 orders.

On another subject: AIDA 4 is now out from NAVB-West. Contains article on the Miller Number Recat project plus the complete map/rules to Gary Gygax's 1970 game Napoleon Diplomacy II. Price is 90¢ from me. [Rod] RUDDIGORE 1 is available for SASE. Contains catalogue of ORChives South, including prices on a number of items we have for sale. RUDDIGORE 2 is $1.00. Contains a reproduction of all 10 issues of the first postal Diplomacy 'zine in the world, Conrad von Metzke's 1962 MONGO. Includes article on the "hoax" MONGO of 1970 and the real MONGO which I was able to locate and recover, finally, only this year.

1980AC (MENSA 10) SUMMER 1902: England F Nwy R Nwg; Austria (NRR) F Tri R OTB; Germany A Swe R OTB.

FALL 1902: Austria even. England even. France even. Germany build F Kie. Italy build F Rom and F Nap. Russia even. Turkey build A Con.

SPRING 1903 due August 10.

MENSA 7 ENDS

1977CY (MENSA 7) has ended in a three way draw in Fall 1916. The draw is between Linc Beaumont (Austria), Paul Funkenbusch (France), and H. D. Bassett (Italy). Austria had 17 centers, France 4, and Italy 13. Get your statements in.

+++PRESS+++

ENG-GER: I don't think that Austrian occupation of Rumania constitutes a stab. They are still a threat as allies. The A-R alliance is a threat to all of us and shouldn't be ignored. No answer from France, so I assume he's still ignoring the obvious. Maybe he'll help if you give him Belgium. ((This is Diplomacy-by-zine))

LONDON TIMES: Despite reports to the contrary, French fleets do not dissolve upon putting to sea; unless of course it was a sea of Compound W. ((Yech! That's not funny; that's sick!))

BRISTOL BUGLE: Why do Russians talk with their hands?

Because they can't stand each other's breath.

DURHAM DAILY NEWS: How does a French Admiral review his fleet?
Through a glass-bottomed boat.

ENG-MILKSOP: If you can figure out that I was writing about French fleets when I used "it," then you should be able to discern that "sink" was being used as a verb not as a noun! (Probably some Junior High plebe...)
((Close. He's a Senior High geek))

THE DAILY MUSCOVITE: Officials of the Imperial Japanese Government met with the Czar today for the purpose of giving Russia their unconditional surrender. You will recall that Tokyo was completely destroyed by our new anti-matter bomb. The Russian National Guard, stationed in Armenia at present, has been transferred to the island nation to restore order.
The Czar would not confirm nor deny that Berlin would be the next target for the bomb, but he did say another anti-matter bomb was nearing the completion stage. ((Do you get the feeling that this game is being slowly taken over by Flash Gordon groupies? Anti-matter bombs!))

((AUSTRIAN PRESS)) -- As heard from a radio inside a small tavern in the mountain village of Sopron -- This portion of the news is brought to you by the Iranian Express Card -- don't leave the Embassy without it. Kaiser Franz-Josef announced his plans to widen the scope of the police action in Germany. This is in continued response to the violent dissent of the German peoples over the indulgent spending of much-needed national resources on warships. They claim the land forces have become so weak as to be vulnerable to attack. The police action began in Munich when crack Austrian assault forces were invited to join in on border patrol and anti-rioting operations in various industrial centers. Also, an ultimatum was given to England. Any attempt to give military aid or assistance to the remaining evil, vile, corrupt, and altogether bad forces of Count Spahgetini will be interpreted as an act of war against the people of Austria. This is also true of any attack made against France and her colonies. ((This will pass with no comment from the GM)) MILKSOP SOAP SUDS PRESENTS: As the Coat Turns, Ch. 1

As the curtain rises ((with the remains of your lunch)), we find Clark Cantaloni and French cousin ~~de~~ ~~le~~ (wrong skit) Gerard le Gâteau in a heated argument.

"Gerard, you must take Venice."

"Non, mon cher Clark. It is your territory. I will do anything to keep it yours."

"Gerard, I am not long for this world. I am too foolish to survive long. But you, you are strong and wise. ((relatively speaking, of course)) You will know how to save the world from the peril personified by Johann Jabbelschimatt, the Austrian terror..."

Will Gerard and Clark ever agree on who is to take Venice? Will they agree before Johann takes it? Why is Johann so evil?

For the answers to these and other questions (Mommy, can I change channels?) tune in next month for AS THE COAT TURNS.

ASSOCIATED GERMAN PRESS (AGP) -- When questioned by reporters today on what France's latest press release was about, Field Marshal Von Schwartz-toten, upon recovering from his uncontrollable fit of laughter, said it was no wonder the French armed forces have proved so ineffective if the press release correctly reflected the woolly state of affairs so well expressed by the French leader. The Field Marshal expressed his hope that the French leader recovers soon from this most recent bout of mental instability. He considered it vital that the unfounded French paranoia of German invasion be laid to rest but in an attempt to defend the German frontier from some insane attack, has initiated defensive maneuvers in that area. ((I have an English professor who would shudder at the sight of those long, convoluted sentences!))

AGP -- In a statement smuggled through the Austrian-German lines, a prominent clergyman from Vienna condemned the recent unprovoked attack on Germany. Since there has been almost a total news blackout in Austria-Hungary since the outbreak of war, most of the country's population has not been aware of the course of hostilities. Due to a recent convocation of bishops at Vienna, attended by most of the European ecclesiastics, the Austrians have finally been made aware of the excesses of the Austrian armed forces. In a spontaneous outbreak of protest against their leader's policies, the common men called upon their government to desist their aggression upon their German cousins. It is reported that Austrian troops fired upon the protesters, leaving several dead and a feeling of discontent in the city. ((Austrian gov't should ask for seperation of church and Diplomacy)) ((More German press next month, sorry Paul))

The Abbey

Dear Mr. Horton:

I was most delighted to see Agatha's contribution accepted for your Demonstration Game Analysis by famous writers. There certainly seems to be a definite prejudice on the part of most publishers against work written posthumously. Thus, for example, my recently completed 18 volume work, Beyond The Gates-"Improvements Made In Heaven Since the Arrival of the English", has attracted no interest. I am pleased to see that in Diplomacy zines where people who have never existed at all, often have little trouble finding a game, no such superstitions are evident.

Sincerely,

/ /Sir Winston Churchill

Analysis of Demonstration Game 1979CT

Chapter 11--The Fate of Nations by Sir Winston Churchill

The first thing that impresses me about the current position in 79CT is the familiar fate of Constantinople. Once again that proud bastion of Europe stands alone against the merciless hordes of godless Asiatics. Once again her pitiful handful of defenders man the ancient charred battlements and gaze hopelessly at the endless lines of watch fires stretching beyond the Golden Horn. Once again the gallant few peer forlornly westward through the smoke, hoping against hope in their desperation that Italy may intervene in their behalf--a hope that we know will never be fulfilled. And once again the city shall fall to the heathen who, being incapable of lighting the candle of democracy for themselves, yet seeing how brightly the flames of freedom burn in the hearts of Europeans, endeavor to steal the fire for themselves or else, in their bestial envy, snuff out that oft flickering flame that others might be forever reduced to their level.

More importantly, however, we see that the English forces have once again been driven from the continent, with their very homeland threatened. While it may seem ironic that this time, unlike the similar situation at Dunkirk, it is the Germans who by abdicating their responsibilities have forced the doughty English to accept embarrassing and humiliating defeat, it should not surprise the historian that it is once again the haughty French who loom as a dark cloud on the horizon for our most splendid isle. As the spectre of the fleur-de-lis once again glares malevolently across our all too narrow channel we must return to the thousand year old question. Will the glory of Agincourt, whence the desperately outmanned yet doughty yeomenry of Albion did stand the charge of the human fortresses with blooded lances astride their fire breathing non-shod steeds--will such glory be forgotten? Will the invincible Marlborough's dazzling litany of victories--from Malplaquet to Oudenarde to Ramilles to Lille and Tournai--to the blessed gap in the line at Blenheim--that splendid gap that the peerless duke did midwife and nurture and raise as if it were a sickly child until it stood full bloom in the center of the enemy line--where like a battle-axe through butter the duke did smash the French center so completely that the shards stood for nothing--shall all of this go for naught? And if the good Lord Nelson should see that his incomparable smashing of the French fleet, not once but three separate times, at the eventual cost of his life--were he to see that it were all in vain would he not pluck out his good eye that such scenes be forever hidden from his sight. And finally on that glorious June day at the nameless yet immortal crossroads in Flanders, will the "Hurrahs" of the Scots Greys, their scarlet coats blazing in the sun, matching the crimson of the French blood streaming down their upraised sabres as they crashed into the fleeing blue clad infantry--will those cheers be forever silenced as the tyrants of the "Sun King" with their fleur-de-lis finally crush the champions of democracy and the Union Jack? Never! I SAY NEVER! It can not be! It must not be! IT SHALL NOT BE!!
